Rcgp curriculum pdf

Jump to content Above all, internship is where GPStR records its training in all its forms and settings. Its main function is to be an educational tool that will record and facilitate the management of the journey of clinical and personal development through training. This is the system used to record the evidence gathered through the application of WPBA tools. It can be described as a glue that unites the training and evaluation of the curriculum. All wpba tool recording facilities are marked in the areas of competence so as to easily access the overall picture of competence. The trainer or educational supervisor will also be able to submit items in the title of the content. The traineeship ePortfolio should also be used to record and validate naturally present evidence within the limits of competence. This is evidence that is manifested in practice and which illustrates the competence of GPStR. This can be taken as evidence of data collection and interpretation or communication skills. Evidence that GPStR is late for operations on a regular basis can be discussed with GPStR and enrolled in teamwork. Naturally, the available evidence must be confirmed by the GP trainer. This section of GPonline is designated by the RCGP as an appropriate educational resource for training and teaching the GP curriculum.
